Monday, 9 June – Professions as teachers does not become a hindrance for a group of UMS Distance Learning Teachers to show off their artistic talent through a performance of play.

UMS Creative Writing lecturer from Faculty of Humanities, Arts and Heritage, Mohd Suhaimi Md Yassin said; even though the teachers teach different subjects but they are able to show off their artistic performance talents to the maximum.

“Some of them are Physical Education, Mathematic, English teachers but they are able to perform a performance of play. All of them are able to awe the audience with the story play and their characters.”

“This also means that the Distance Learning Teachers skills are able to bring forward this play not just at the university level, but they also can bring this play to the national and international level,” he said.

Commenting on the overall performance, he said that the students show that they are able to master the stage areas with a powerful vocal and strong theme and messages. The variation and diversity of the performance, is also making it as a brilliant performance.

Every performance from these students is able in giving deep impact to the spectators, through the meaning, message, thinking ideologies and ideas other than becoming a great play,” he added more.

The Distance Learning group of students are school teachers for primary and secondary schools performed their play at Theatre Ahmad Nisfu, UMS as their prerequisite to pass with distinction in their creative writing subject, this semester.
