Abstrak

Malaysia-Indonesia share common characteristic in diverse society. However, both are different in term of ruling system whereby Malaysian constitution recognise Islam as a Federal religion and simultaneously practice religious freedom for non-Muslim. Conversely, the Republic of Indonesia practice religious freedom without any recognition of certain religion. The difference in religious ruling system do not bring them apart to enjoy harmony in diversity. This proof to be the fact in daily life interaction of people from different religious background. This kind of amicable interaction is simply known as Dialogue of life. The study shows that the dialogue of life is a mechanism for building competent human capital to live harmoniously with the others. This article aims to discuss various initiatives conducted by Muslims in Malaysia and Indonesia in the activities of dialogue of life at the grassroots level. The participants of the Muslims not only come from the NGOs, but also from the individual experience both in formal and informal interaction. The study proves that the daily life interaction or dialogue of life capable in generating open-minded and accommodative human capital to share living together with people in any different situations.
