

Newly diagnosed nasopharyngeal carcinoma with intracranial extension complicated with multiple thrombotic complications

ABSTRACT

Cavernous sinus thrombosis (CST) is a rare and life-threatening condition, it usually presented in septic patient due to infection of central face or paranasal sinuses.^{1,2} Aseptic causes are less common, is a thrombotic process and often following trauma and prothrombotic event.